

SUMMARY OF ST. LOUIS MARKETS.

SUMMARY OF ST. LOUIS MARKETS.

Weather conditions were the ruling factor in the local grain market yesterday. The warth traders who had gone short in the fancied security of clear skies and higher temperatures, were forced to cover their positions at a loss. The heavy rain and the high wind which came in this morning, forced them to cover early in the session. The upward movement was aided by unexpected strength in foreign markets and the resumption of foreign buying on a fairly large scale. Heavy receipts here and at other primary points and the difficulty of getting grain out of the country, also helped to support the market. The weather conditions which caused the recent open weather would seriously damage the new crop. This fear was especially noticeable in its effect on the demand for the July option, which was well taken into account by the market. The market was not so much influenced by the favorable outlook for the coming year, as it was by the present conditions. The market was not so much influenced by the outlook for the coming year, as it was by the present conditions.

the movement of the grain to market, corn was strong in line with wheat. Export receipts were heavy and the local stocks in store showed a decrease. Good buying Chicago and sympathy with wheat kept the market on the upturn.
 May wheat opened $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ up and closed $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ up.
 May corn opened $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ up and closed $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ up.
 May oats closed $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ up.

Receipts of produce were fairly large, but there was good demand for fresh stock, and loss was small.

Local securities were dull. Tractions were easy and trust company issues steady.

Yesterday's bank clearings were $5,564,122, balances $905,610. Discount rates were steady between 5 and 6 per cent.

Spot cotton was quiet and unchanged in the market.

Through receipts were heavy and cold weather will facilitate the movement to the market, the stocks in store showed a decrease, and there was continued good outside demand. In addition to these bullish indications, the market was strengthened by the advance in prices of the foreign wool. An excellent export and cash inquiry.
